

YES

West Virginia's chemical/polymer industry

Attracting multinational companies to shape a better future ...

Infrastructure and supplies

While many West Virginia advantages that attract multinational companies are stronger than ever, structural shifts have made West Virginia even more competitive as a global chemical and polymer hub.

Active chemical industrial parks throughout the state offer access to shared services and colocation at sites with significant infrastructure and existing permits.

West Virginia is located within the Appalachian Basin, which produces essential feedstock for the chemical and polymer industries. Combined with the concentration of existing chemical plants, West Virginia provides your company with access to reliable supplies from a variety of sources.

Incentives to investment

The West Virginia Division of Economic Development works hard to make the process of locating in West Virginia smooth and seamless. Our team works with businesses to locate a new sites, expand facilities, export goods, train employees and more.

- Site selection support
- Tax credits, tax exemptions and special property tax provisions
- Low interest loans
- Employee recruitment and training
- Strong transportation infrastructure

Resources abound

West Virginia has a long history with the chemical industry.

- Abundant water supply and gas reserves
- Skilled workforce
- Strong higher education and community and technical college system
- Partners such as Chemical Alliance Zone and Polymer Alliance Zone collaborate to advance the chemical industry in West Virginia

Natural gas resources

In 2019, West Virginia was the sixth-largest natural gas-producing state in the United States, with an output of 1.9 trillion cubic feet.

Industry Leaders

HEALTHY ANIMALS.
HEALTHY FOOD.
HEALTHY WORLD.™

#YESWV

westvirginia.gov

in X @wvdevo

YES

West Virginia's chemical/polymer industry

Join other companies who said #YESWV

WEST VIRGINIA
Economic Development

1900 Kanawha Boulevard East • Building 3, Suite 600 • Charleston, WV 25305
800-982-3386 • 304-558-2234 • westvirginia.gov • @wvdevo

#YESWV